

Review Momentum Tracker

Velocity, not totals — a competitor gaining reviews faster than you is a real signal, even if their total is still lower.

Total review count is a lagging, slow-moving number. Momentum — how many new reviews are landing per month — tells you who's actively building right now, which matters more for spotting a shift early.

Month	Your review count	Your new reviews this month	[Competitor] review count	[Competitor] new reviews this month
Month 1
Month 2
Month 3
Month 4
Month 5
Month 6
Month 7
Month 8
Month 9
Month 10
Month 11
Month 12

Reading the trend

- [] If their monthly new-review count is consistently higher than yours, that's momentum worth understanding — they may have improved their ask process
- [] A sudden spike (positive or negative) for either of you is worth investigating on its own, separate from the general trend
- [] Total count matters less than the direction of travel — a smaller total that's growing fast can catch up quickly